

Rachel Arcus Goldberg '94

Rachel Arcus-Goldberg, graduate of the class of '94 - the first class to attend all 9 years in the current Bet Schraga building. Rachel graduated from Bethlehem Central High School, followed by Brandeis University with a major in Psychology. Inspired by her middle school tanacheducation with Simi Pearl, Rachel received masters' degrees in Social Work, Jewish Education and Jewish Studies from Columbia University and the Jewish Theological Seminary. She worked as the Director of Tribeca Hebrew, a pluralistic Hebrew school in lower Manhattan, from 2005-2007, bringing informal and formal Jewish education to an unaffiliated community. In 2007, Rachel moved to Boston to work at Gann Academy, a pluralistic Jewish High School in Greater Boston. She began working there as the Director of Experiential Education, focusing on school-wide programming. Currently, Rachel works as the Associate Dean of Students, and Israeli Dance teacher at Gann, and runs the Israeli Dance program at Temple Emanuel in Newton, MA. Rachel happily married Jeremy Goldberg, from West Hartford, on Lag B'Omer last year.
